INFORMATION

Greetings, Jerry and Marie Abram!

On the afternoon of Monday, January 19th a friend of mine and I paid a visit to inquire about visiting the two caves on your property. First of all, Marie, I'd like to thank you for the very kind treatment you gave us. You were trying to get your grandson to nap at the time, but you not only took time to chat with us, but even shared some wonderful homemade cookies. YUM!!

A huge thanks goes to both of you for your policy of allowing cavers access to your property. I can't blame you one bit if you had discontinued that access, especially after hearing some of the stories Marie told us about the many incidents out there, including inconsiderate visitors, torn down fences, and rescues. It is indeed the few that often spoil it for the many, but you have been super-tolerant, and on behalf of the many cavers that enjoy the pit, THANK YOU!!

The main purpose of our visit that day was to obtain GPS (global positioning satellite) coordinates for both the pit and small cave, which we were able to do. We collect and update data for a non-profit group called the Indiana Cave Survey, which is all volunteer work. One of the things we do as well is survey and produce maps of caves that haven't been mapped before. Maps had been made for your caves back in 1968 or so, and I was surprised to find that you didn't have copies. I originally intended on just giving you copies of the existing maps. However, I wanted you to have something that looked nicer, so I scanned the maps and basically retraced them, but made them look nicer by putting new text and realigning some things. I don't know if people ever ask you for map copies, but if the occasion arises and you desire to share them, I have included a few copies for that purpose as well. I hope you like them.

Lastly, I just want you to be aware that should you ever get tired of inconsiderate cavers, there is a group here in Indiana called the Indiana Karst Conservancy that formed back in 1986. They now have extensive experience helping landowners manage their caves, including from a legal perspective as well. They realize the pitfalls (pun intended here) many landowners experience, and try to work with them to keep caves accessible to cavers but with restrictions that often help reduce landowner burden. If you should ever want to talk to someone about helping manage Freeman Pit, please contact me and I can put you in touch with someone from the IKC that would be glad to speak with you. I am not trying to persuade you to do this; I just want you to know that the option is available.

Once again, thanks for being such wonderful people. You have a beautiful house and property, and it is indeed a privilege to have access to the caves. By the way, it turns out that my supervisor Julie Stines' dad once worked for or with Jerry. Her maiden name is Campbell. Oh, and finally...keep that young Spider Man in line!!

Sincerely,

collapse of the overlying limestone has occurred. Several holes at this point lead down through the breakdown into an expanded crevice but no significant passage exists at the bottom. The Shale Passage was followed both directions from the "T" for a hundred or so feet and apparently ends in both directions as a crevice going up into the limestone, with small trickles of water entering the cave.

The total mapped length of Crying Cave is 835 feet. (Meander Passage was not mapped.) The cave though small is very interesting geologically, and contains some very massive and beautiful formations near the "big" pit. The cave is essentially dry, although it is somewhat damp in the formation area.

The exact location of Crying Cave was purposely omitted by owner's request. Although Mr. Hatfield was friendly and helpful to us, he did express his concern about people being injured on his property, and would rather not have cavers tromping around on his farm. For this reason, Crying Cave should be considered closed.
